

5 Signs You Need Invoice Automation

A 60-second self-check for crews, offices, and construction teams buried in paperwork. Tick off what sounds familiar.

- 01 Receipts go missing between the job site and the office.
Photos pile up in someone's phone gallery and never make it into your books.
 - 02 Your bookkeeper re-types numbers from photos by hand.
Hours spent every month just transcribing what's already sitting in a chat.
 - 03 You can't tell what a job actually cost until weeks later.
By the time expenses are logged, the job is already closed out.
 - 04 Your team already texts receipts to a group chat — but nobody logs them.
The habit is already there. The system to catch it isn't.
 - 05 Tax season means digging through drawers, texts, and old emails.
Categorizing a year of paper in a weekend is nobody's idea of fun.

If 2 or more of these sound familiar, an automated system usually pays for itself within the first month — in time alone, before counting the receipts you stop losing.
